Amy brings more than 15 years of IT industry experience to her position as Principal Analyst, Managed IT Services. Amy assesses the managed IT services sector, with an emphasis on solutions delivered through the cloud including managed hosting, managed security, managed applications, managed unified communications and managed storage offerings.

Amy previously helped launch Current Analysis' public sector IT Solutions coverage. She has written numerous analytical reports identifying competitive opportunities and threats to system integrators and vendors pursuing the U.S. government business to help clients increase their contract win rate, as well as launching analytical service covering vendor-driven professional services. She has also served as Current Analysis managing editor, overseeing all content produced for our clients.

Amy has also served as a writer and editor at well-known industry publications including tele.com, InformationWeek, InternetWeek, and Data Communications, as well as a technology industry analyst covering network management at Enterprise Management Associates. Amy also was the editor of CMP's InternetWeek site, as well as regulator contributor to newsletters written for ShoreTel's IP telephony and McAfee's security customers.
