The Current Analysis Enterprise Network Systems module focuses on companies that provide networking hardware solutions deployed on premise to support enterprise business operations. The Application Optimization market covers includes both IP traffic management and, increasingly, security monitoring and compliance technologies The Enterprise Switching market includes network building blocks: high capacity switch/routers, used in the core of large enterprise networks, modular switches, used in enterprise backbone and wiring closet applications, and fixed configuration switches for the enterprise wiring closet.

Enterprise data center and edge connectivity solutions appear under the Enterprise Router market segment. Enterprise WLAN technologies, which increasingly combine a centralized control element with distributed enterprise switching, appear in the Enterprise WLAN segment. The Enterprise Network Systems analytical team also covers significant events in the Storage Area Networking market.

Coverage areas include:

Application Optimization - Includes all products which provide application acceleration functions in the data-center, including load balancing, edge traffic compression, route selection and management, bandwidth management, and data security monitoring and compliance reporting and enforcement.

Enterprise Switching - Covers the competitive market for enterprise LAN switching hardware, both enterprise backbone and wiring closet solutions, fixed form and modular chassis.

Enterprise Routing - Covers Enterprise Access Routers, products that provide LAN to WAN connectivity and next generation IP services for the branch office, including integrated security, voice, and content delivering mechanisms.

Enterprise WLAN - Provides analysis of Enterprise WLAN market activities, including access points, WLAN switches, WLAN management and diagnostics, and WLAN security.
